

Perspectives on Migration Flows in Asia and Europe

Antonio Marquina

Migration is becoming an increasingly important topic in domestic politics, international studies and human security studies. This book seeks to address an issue that divides researchers and politicians. There are some that believe the governments have the option to shut the doors to migration flows in the short, medium term. This book stresses that stopping migration flows in the short, medium-term is fast becoming an unattainable goal for Asian and European states.

The book explores key “push and pull” migration drivers selected based on their relevance or exceptionality with regards to the principal geographical areas of Asia and Europe: an increasing ageing population in Asia and Europe which is considered a crucial driver for immigration growth in both continents; the impact of the economic crisis on the migration flows both within and towards Asia and Europe; the impact of climate change on rural areas and urban settlements in Asia and the surrounding countries of Europe; and the importance of the refugee flows induced by internal conflicts or dictatorial political regimes, that see refugees eventually becoming permanent refugees in different countries.

The last section of the book is devoted to two specific constraints. Firstly migration border controls in the EU and the role of the new agency Frontex, and secondly the EU policies for immigrant integration. These two constraints are selected over others as they are not only deemed most likely to be imitated by Asian states but also highlight where there are significant differences between the strategies of Asian and European states in dealing with migration.

Contents: Introduction Antonio Marquina

Trends and Projection of Population Changes in East Asia: Population Ageing and Migration Flows in South Korea and Japan, Sang-lim Lee; The EU and Ageing Population, Implications for Migration Flows, Juan Díez-Nicolás; Migration flows Coming to the EU and the Financial Crisis, Gianluca Pastori ; Economic Crisis, Migration Flows and ASEAN Responses, Luan Thuy Duong; The Work Situation and Social Attitudes of Migrant workers in China during the Crisis, Peilin Li and Wei Li; Migration Flows in South Asia: Social and Economic Dimensions, Jakub Zajączkowski; Prospects of Environmentally-Induced Migration from the Southern and Eastern Mediterranean to the European Union, Antonio Marquina; Prospects of Environmentally-Induced Migration in Northeast Asia, James E. Nickum ; Korean Unification Scenarios and the Implications of Contingencies in North Korea for Refugee Flows , Young-Ho Park; State Failure and the North Korean Refugee Issue, Won-Woong Lee; Iraqi Conflict-induced Refugees and Their Regional Impact, Beatriz Tomé Alonso; The Challenge of Immigrant Integration in Europe: a Fundamental Aspect of Human Security , Agapi Kadylaki; Towards a European Border Management Strategy: FRONTEX and the Challenge of Illegal Migration, Kostas Ifantis.

ANTONIO MARQUINA is Chair in International Security and Cooperation at the Faculty of Political Science, Complutense University, Madrid, Spain. He is the Founder and Director of the Research Unit on Security and International Cooperation (UNISCI). He was previously Director of 18 projects on European Security, Mediterranean, North Africa, African Migration, Turkey and Caucasus, Iran, Energy, Global Warming and Climate Change and Asia Pacific Security.

September 2011, Paperback € 25.00, ISBN: 978-84-95838-26-1

ORDER FORM

Title: Perspectives on Migration Flows in Asia and Europe

Price: €25.00

Quantity: _____

ISBN: 978-84-95838-26-1

Name: _____

Delivery Address: _____

Postal code: _____

Country: _____

Email: _____

Telephone: _____

Postage and Packing

In Europe, Please add €7 per order;

Outside Europe, Please add €8 per order

Signature: _____

Date: _____

SEND THIS ORDER TO

Prof. Antonio Marquina, UNISCI

Dept. International Relations

Faculty of Political Science

Campus Somosaguas

28223 MADRID, Spain

OR VIA E-MAIL TO

marioant@cps.ucm.es

Once the order is received, the UNISCI administrative section will inform to the sender the account to which he/she has to send the transfer.